

Cambridge-INET Institute

Summer School in Social Economics 2014

The Cambridge-INET institute in collaboration with Human Capital and Economic Opportunity (HCEO, Chicago) will hold its 2013 Summer School at the University of Cambridge from June 16-June 20, 2014. The theme of the Summer School is Social Economics. The organizers of the Summer School are Professor Steven N. Durlauf and Professor Sanjeev Goyal.

This Summer School brings together internationally leading authorities to lecture on Social Economics. The aim is to provide state-of-the-art overviews of different aspects of the subject and especially to bridge the gap between the theoretical and empirical work.

We will provide an intensive one-week experience that teaches the tools needed to study questions in social economics and also to communicate a sense of the research frontier in this area. The teaching of tools is of particular importance as the theoretical and empirical study of questions in this field call forth concepts drawn from mathematics and also from the other social and information sciences.

Summer School 2014 Lecturers:

Lawrence Blume, Cornell University
Steven Durlauf, University of Wisconsin-Madison
Armin Falk, Bonn University
Sanjeev Goyal, University of Cambridge
Shachar Kariv, University of California, Berkeley
Rachel Kranton, Duke University
Kaivan Munshi, University of Cambridge

Venue: Moeller Centre, Cambridge

Registration fee: £250.00 (includes accommodation, breakfast, and lunch)

How to apply?

Please send your application (research statement, a reference letter and CV) to Marion Reusch, Cambridge-INET Administrator, inet@econ.cam.ac.uk.

Application deadline March 15, 2014

Read Online: <https://www.inet.econ.cam.ac.uk/schools/summer-school-2014>